Knowing no boundaries of sex, gender and possibly sex characteristics at times as well. Thanks to the crew from out of the blue diving deep for the marine news as they do, every new Sunday morning from 11:30 till noon, and we've got a range of issues on the show today. And article today in the Sunday Herald Sun, about birth certificates, we've got conversation about a court case. We've got talk about why bi people feeling invisible and a lot more. My page Sally goldner and out of the pan 3 CR 855 am Melbourne and snail mail PO Box 1277 Collingwood 3066 very much any opinions expressed on the show today are my own, not those of any organization with which I have been associated past or present.

And well going to start today, while we started the show musically today with the fabulous Caitlin Harnett and the Pony boys and Rosie from Late Night. Essentials back in 2016, some fantastic, nothing like a good baritone guitar to get your vibration going, in my opinion.

And very, very good to have such great Australian music everywhere and that we can all enjoy well time to start to start the show again today with a very old story. I've probably told this gag before but it's come up again and that's the story of the conservative child of progressive parents who seem to be at loggerheads at times but you know it seemed to work itself out and came home. One day at about age. 16 and said, parents, I've told you I'm not going to tell you what I want to do for my career, and the parents said, Will Always Love You child but you're not going to become a PR spokesman for a nuclear waste company. No, no will always love you. You're not going to go and work for a tobacco company, are you? But will always love, you know, know what are you going to do? I'm going to be a headline writer for the herald Sun, get out. We don't want to know you.

Yes, it's that time again because of an article that is on page 31 of today's tree edition of The Herald sun, with a huge headline, thousands change in inverted commas, sex in inverted, commas underneath easier, process for new gender. Now thousands, let's have a look at this, you know, sort of technically, possibly. Correct. The article starts thousands of Victorians have changed gender on official documents without undergoing medical procedures. Since a new law was introduced to make the processes easier more than 2,700 people, including children have made changes to their birth certificate. Since the new law came into effect in 2020.

Now, let's just stop and have a look at that. The laws came into effect in early May 2020. So that's about four years. They've got four years Financial years worth of data 800 a year. So yeah, it's thousands over four years. But it's not even a thousand a year and that's data released by the Registrar of births, deaths and marriages. I think of great interest here for Trans people then we get to something. Yes, a bit better up to 43% of people to changed and I'm quoting the article here with these words, change their gender from male to female 33% from female to male and 25 percent change their identity to other. Now, that may not be the term used, you can use any term under Victorian or provided it's not frivolous or vexatious or offensive or something like that.

And so that, you know, assumes what we've always known in the trans and gender diverse communities. That there is this kaleidoscope of gender, and gender, identity, and gender expression. And this talks about gender identity. And now, you've largely got now, 43 percent of the fact that it's 25% in the middle. It's, I'm surprised a little surprised at in from assigned male, identifying as female to 33%. I mean, it's slightly big variation, but it's still relatively even. And according to the laws applicants are required to assign a statutory declaration. Well, that's not quite true. The applicant doesn't someone who's known the person for more than 12 months have to and it does this article In fairness does say children are able to change the marker with the consent of a parent or Guardian.

And well, declaring night. Why didn't get any payment for this or anything? Declaring, my interest, the figures have been welcomed by algae BT, Q, i+, Advocates diversity, Consultants a league on, the do who's that. Welcome. The new saying it means the law and Society has affirmed who they are, which is very helpful, both practically and in mental health terms, they said, oh I don't use they, but I could be could things could be worse. I could be of a, I don't rely don't identify as non-binary, but I should Taps been proactive and told them I pronounce the reporters Kelly, Douglas and Alex white to whom I spoke. But I use sheep and they expected the figures to rise, to continue to rise as trans. People became more accepted in society and transgender Victoria CEO dr. Song Vivian said, said those Figures were also likely to continue Rising people. Particularly young people are exploring, their gender diversity, potentially because that is, they feel more supported and they have been previously. So, yes, we do expect to see more.

So nice that we've had trans people and gender diverse people quoted. We then have the usual so-called balanced, some medical experts have said the moves could create problems when it call came to treating people for certain conditions where a person was not forthcoming about their gender. Well, the reasons people aren't forthcoming about gender identity in health settings is because they don't feel they're going to get the right service and you know, we've popped that

And some sort of, you know, you know, the answer is to educate people. So people feel comfortable. And the way to do a good way to do that is ask pronouns first, which means you get the gender identity, right? Only asked for how someone was assigned at Birth or their current physical body, when it's relevant. If I've got a

You know, broken finger, why do you need to know how I was assigned at Birth or what my? It's on my birth certificate. Now, I don't really think it makes a lot of difference. And the legend says, here in this article, the again, this so-called balanced approach legislation to adopt the change, caused a stir in 2019. After the Victorian, women's Guild raised concerned. The reforms could threaten the safety of vulnerable women and compromise. Women's only spaces, I would like to know

There's ever been if anyone out there can find independently verifiable evidence such as a court case where there's been a problem like this. I haven't heard of it and I've been involved in the trans and queer communities for twenty nine and a half years nearly 30 Goodness, Me and the changes followed similar moves in the ACT. South Australia. Well, Western Australia, Tasmania Northern Territory and Queensland. Now it should be noted that the changes in West Australia and Queensland happened after Victoria and the Queensland law, since they've been in 250 people made alterations to their birth certificate in the first six months. So that's looking kind of similar allowing for variation of population.

So look, I have to say I've seen worst articles and seen a lot worse in Murdoch media, in my time. That's overwhelmingly fair, you know, sort of, I suppose they have to do the balance. They don't even thankfully quote so-called medical experts, obviously. And it is fair to say that I, and probably a large percentage of trans people would disagree, with the views of the Victorian Women's Guild, and I don't, as a side note really see, there's a lot. Any any, I will say any evidence or lot or logic to back that, and this has been this crying wolf on the threats to women for as long. Well, since I came out and pride obviously before, and I really think enough is enough on that.

One should be added though, alone. Not getting it. Not in this article. That changes that went through the West Australian Parliament recently have given some upgrade to West Australian laws. The long outdated, gender reassignment board has been abolished, but the duodenum medical sign off in Western Australia. And there's well, I have to get some trans people from Western Australia on the show to talk about that there was controversy about whether those changes were enough. Now, some people will say get through what you can now without controversy, and then do the rest later. The question is, when does later come? Because the other side of the coin is that people will say, I will, we did that a few years ago. We don't want to go back to it again. Mmm. So I'd love to hear from if there are any trans and gender diverse people or supportive family members over in the west, who sort of are able to talk to that. That would be very, very cool. We've had a message in from Rainbow reporter, roving reporter. I beg, your pardon roving wrote the first one, which connects to the story. I've just discussed who reads newspapers these days. Well, unfortunately, I don't have a, the article was pay walled so I couldn't get it online writing. So I had to get the tree copy declining among specially amongst younger demographic. Well, you know, sort of pretty much lots of people.

Same to be rating them less. Maybe I'm just a bit of habit. Roving serves their local cafes stop papers since covered. Do they really have any impact on articles that they publish? We'll look, it's an interesting question. I'm as a side because this article is pay walled. I can't get to it and so therefore can't see what comments are underneath. Not that, of course, we should ever rarely if ever read them. But there could be some positives as Well but you know some people do access it and so there's no TV, it's Legacy Media. Is that becoming more relevant yet newspapers? Certainly you know sort of certainly on the way out declining sales and all that but now we have to consider it roving popped in another message. The outer East is getting inclusive in specially to local Council level rainbow road map at the city of Casey launched with Joel Creasy as special guest special.

To Shelley Capaz de cassis and Pamela Trumath, who worked tirelessly to get the change quite Achievers, who deserve recognition? Yeah, absolutely. I think this is where a lot of the change now needs to just keep happening. We've got, it's fair to say, a lot of the state territory federal laws done. Knowing that there are still more to go religious exemptions protection for people, with variation of sex characteristics, where only the ACT has protection. Now, it's about service, provision being inclusive at local government level and

And in the community sector which increasingly they are, so it's good to get it but, you know, sort of the general rule is and this is where roving comments are certainly spot-on. Is that the further away we go from the bigger eight cities around Australia, it seems that often there is less inclusivity and that's why it's important that we have outer suburbs, those just beyond The Fringe Regional rural Etc, everybody being inclusive. So, yeah, well done to those people.

Her involved. Yeah there was some well debates did by a Casey counselor some years ago so it's good to see that. That seems to be going behind us and yeah well done to all those out. Your weight roving. Let's have a track from. Well it's an Australian band who I'm used to play around the Pub's. Maybe still some still do I like this one. It's a band called Blue Stone from an album. The Closer you get.

And their version of a Neil Young song. This is called Let It Shine. 3. CR 855 am 3 CR Digital 3, CR dot org Dot 3 CR on demand out of the pan with Sally.

We've got a difficult topic. Now I'm going to mention our content note numbers once again. I think we have to sort of when I say we have to mention it. I think it's sort of one of those difficult but right things to do. So if you do are distressed in any way by the next Story, please again, Q life, including switchboard in Victoria and Tasmania 1-800 1845 to seven rainbow door.

No 1367. You can SMS rainbow door if that's safer or more convenient, zero four eight zero zero one, seven, two, four, six. We have to pay our respect to the situation in the country of Georgia. Where because area arbres me, dizzy. Sadly was murdered the day after the Georgian National parliament. Passed an a major anti-lgbt bill.

I'm not going to go into the details of the murder. The interior Ministry said it was investigating quote, a premeditated murder committed with particular cruelty and aggravating circumstances on gender grounds. And there has been an arrest in the in the small South Caucasian Nation as Georgia is. And the Georgian president, who opposed the new law said, the horrendous

That is raised urgent. Questions about hate crimes and discrimination. However, the legislation from the Prime Minister severely restricts rights for LGBT people. There's a ban on this article calls it, same-sex, marriage gender, affirming surgeries child adoption by non address sexuals and the promotion of same-sex relationships in schools. It went through Parliament, 80, 40. The usual Buncombe title protection of family values and minors, which of course,

This is twisted and the local campaign has said, there'd been homophobic and transphobic language in promoting. The bill, and several activists directly linked, the government's harmful rhetoric to the killing of Murrs up. Union has condemned legislation, but most of all, we send our condolences to friends family and colleagues of caesarea what a horrible situation and it just reminds us that, you know, it is still not easy if to be yourself in so many places. So yeah, once Again, 1-800 1845 to seven one, eight hundred seven to nine 3670 for anything in those story. That story caused distress on the other hand here in Australia, we have a openly trans woman elected to Newcastle Council up in New South Wales. Paige Johnson has been elected. And this has been, is she set to be elected to council and although it says here, she's been elected. Not sure she's at the top of the ticket for the first time which could make a difference. So it's counsellor elect just described three different ways in the same article. And, you know, she said that her gender affirmation Journey gave her the drive to stand for local government. I felt like I was fighting my way back through life with one arm tied behind my back.

Like I'm finally free and I had the confidence to know that I can go and do this so new University of Newcastle criminologist dr. Justin Ellis has researched, queer representation in the public sphere and says, it's important for True representation and lived expertise of diverse, sexual orientation, gender identity, and sex characteristics. Although unfortunately, those words not used by dr. Ellis is very important, the word set. Combs variation of sex characteristics takes

H to be visible at the moment, because we've got this rise of myths and disinformation against queer and other minority communities, and 75% of New Castle voters supported marriage, equality above the average of the nation 61.8%, and Paige Johnson is a civil engineer, hello? To trans people who are Engineers. We like, that's a, that's a bit of an in sort of, in comment there, and that ties in nicely with.

With a message from roving. Do I know how many queer candidates are coming up on these local council elections in Victoria. Yes, I might have to get on to the fabulous. Sean Mulcahy. You seems to be the local government queer expert in Victoria and see if we know if we've got any numbers yet across our Council. Yes some telepathy going on there in terms of candidates so good to see this in around the country.

And Miss Johnson coming back to this article also vice vice president, the hunted General Alliance which advocates for Trans non-binary and gender diverse people. And she hoped that it would influence change around New South Wales, good article from ABC News and ABC queer, who do great great. Media work. No, competition going on here. It's really important that we acknowledge good, queer media and certainly the ABC queer section added up.

By Monique Shafter It does a really good job and ran with originating and summarizing storage. You can get a monthly summary, which I do and keep your eye on that. So, yes, a bit of a mix of news there. Good to see trans visibility but again, our absolute sympathies and strength with the Trans and queer communities in the country of Georgia. Let's have a listen now, to attract, from course, one of my, for one of my favorite artists. Colin Hay, this is from Men at Work and track from the second album. Just heard from Men at Work from the cargo album. Their second album the other big one you might say, along with business as usual. Their third album, two hearts still, without them didn't get the attention as they were sort of beginning to, as a

A band originally fading away, but Colin Hay, still playing music either band format with a whole group of people doing the Men at Work songs and was out here a few months ago, touring solo no sign of yesterday and well, it's sometimes it's good to live in the present moment. Other things to discuss on the show today. Better get this one out of the way again, content note, mention of homophobia, perhaps not quite as intense as the story we discussed or a story we discussed in the last segment and roving reporter mentioned this last week and I think this is worth mentioning difficult, as it is that excuse me, round two weeks ago or 10 days ago, Alex Greenwich the New South Wales independent politician who is openly gay man won. The defamation case against Mark Latham. Hoping, it says he hopes it will end Trump style attacks.

In politics Greenwich was awarded a hundred and forty thousand dollars defamation in the defamation action and the Federal Court Justice. David. O'callaghan handed down his judgment on the morning of Wednesday, the 11th of September, after the case was heard in June, and just to SoCal until he's found that the first imputation relating to the primary tweet about mr. Greenwich has, I'll say sexual activities was conveyed and there was something well, not so good about Alex, the judge said he did not agree. The Tweet, implied Greenwich was not a fit and proper person to be a member of the New South Wales Parliament. He said he did not agree that quotes published in the Daily Telegraph article implied. The politician was well. It's difficult to read this a disgusting human being who goes into schools to groom children to become homosexual but Helen said that Greenwich has quite established

Pushed the publication of the primary tweeters caused as likely, to cause serious harm to his reputation. Mr. Latham ride on defenses. I'm in relation to the primary tweet, honest opinion and common law qualified privilege. So, I think the honest opinion, one shows that and the, oh Justice O'Callahan said, the neither defense has been made out. Well, this is probably a little bit of a good sign that the and we all know of course, in queer communities the nonsense. It said of it about us is since, but the fact is been a court case that says it is probably good things. Greenwich thanked, his partner family. I'm full support of the last 18 months and now obviously, a very difficult thing to experience and Latham's Barrett has said that Mr Latham's tweet may have wounded Mr Greenwich, but it didn't wound his reputation. The and then Latham's Barrister also said he's closed. His clients words were offensive crass and vulgar but question if they met the threshold for serious harm will disagree and also said that the response to the post have been critical of Latham and supported of Greenwich. Well, I'm not sure I'm not a lawyer. I'm not sure whether that really matters. Thanks for bringing that one to our attention roving.

We've also got this ongoing situation, I'm going to be very care. I need to be probably careful about this one but there's been a situation again. The guardian back on The 5th of September reported that a lesbian group wants to exclude trans women and declared itself to the Melbourne gay bar. The peel and the Australian Human Rights Commission says, the peels are few right to refuse heterosexual people, and this is both heterosexual men and women was granted to help gay men achieve equality and would seem that my reading of this article is that all the lesbian action group says that, you know, they are seeking to discriminate. They say, the quote from this article says, the lesbian action groups Council Leigh Howard said, we are seeking to discriminate and this head on behalf of his clients were female and we'd like some rights please.

And well, you know the thing is the different, my personal opinion. I want to be a little careful here. The commission, the human rights trained Human Rights Commission has argued that the lesbian action group exemption if it was granted, would heighten health risks among trans lesbians? And so, you know, there's a difference between stopping oppression from a majority. Then, you know, sort of is that kicking the know sort of emotional buck-passing and kicking people who are further down. So I think there is a note this Nuance that's needed. Again, rather than generalization. So thanks for that one. Roving and decision expected in December. And yeah, also, your are mentioned the allegations against the rapper, you know, who was formerly known as Puff. Daddy now Diddy, Sean, love Coons or burnt Ron Jon Coombs and that there was and that's there were six parties, featuring gay rappers who are high on ketamine? Well, I'm, you know, sort of substance use needs to be, you know, you've got to be careful about it and not harm yourself and anyone else.

But, you know, sort of whether they were gay rappers or straight or bi rappers. I'm not, you know, sort of I'm wonder if this news limited.com headline is inappropriate, but if I'm Sean Diddy, Combs has misused the gay rappers compared to heterosexual ones, or there's been abuse in any way, that's not on, but it obviously distressing for our community. If it is only will say, queer, people who have been taken into account, as far as I know, and I did not, I've choked did a quick bit of looking around. Did he is a surprise? As I can tell is heterosexual to my knowledge. So, if he's abusing game in, direct will say it directly or indirectly or there is abuse. When something's under his we'll say directional control. That's certainly not on.

Coming back to a story that I wanted to cover today it is celebrate bisexuality day tomorrow and here's a story that I have from just last night which I want to get more information on but want to highlight now the website GC end IE says that headline 40% of by people feel invisible in lgbtq+ spaces, survey reveals and that's according to a survey done by the dating app her. And they said to that 2,000 users responded, raise your and experience referred to as by Panic, a sense of exclusion that by people feel within rainbow communities. 48%, this point three percent of by respondents have been assumed to be the straight or gay based on the gender of their partner at the time and it adds two pressures to be able to continuously come out and explain our identity to maintain visibility by people more likely to question, their sexual identity. Compared to lesbians three percent of lesbians reported questioning their sexuality, double will be missed. Even triple ten point eight, two percent of by people questioning.

And it is that sort of back-and-forth. Now, sort of your tried to portion into the straight or in this case lesbian, but for men when gay sort of boxes, and 32% of, by people adapt, their dating style, depending on the gender of their partner. But it demonstrates a flexible approach to dating, which is a good thing I suppose. So and yes, this survey I did come up in time for by sexual Awareness Week. Hello to everyone at the by picnic down it. Now that's happening today. I can't make it unfortunately. Happening until about 2:00. There's some by visibility on the other side of the coin. We need that and there's been lots of good things happening at the stand by us conference reports. Yesterday showed High attendance at the online seminars, which is good to see.

I'll have some more music now. Let's have a track from Martin Plaza and no, not at Sydney shopping center. Boom, boom, boom.
